Your Best Friend

Veterinarians understand how important your pet is to you and your family. Pets are an important part of our families too. Veterinarians can help you choose the right pet for your lifestyle; whether you're an athlete or a couch potato, a single adult living in an apartment or a family with children in suburbia.

Like any family member, pets need regular medical care to stay healthy and active. Your veterinarian can help ensure your pet's health though:

- ◆ New pet consultations
- ◆ Wellness exams and preventative care
- ◆ Vaccinations
- ◆ Diagnostic testing
- ◆ Spay, neuter and other surgical procedures
- ◆ Parasite treatment and prevention
- ◆ Nutritional guidance
- ◆ Dental care
- ◆ Chemotherapy

- ◆ Pain management
- ◆ Behavior counseling
- ◆ Grooming advice

From traditional pets like cats and dogs to more exotic animals such as parrots and iguanas, veterinarians understand the special needs of each species. An important part of health care is regular visits to your veterinarian. Early detection can help prevent serious health conditions. Besides preventative medicine, veterinarians treat injured and ill patients—with compassion and quality care.

Your Other Family Doctor

Veterinarians dedicate their careers to the care and welfare of animals, spending many years in college learning everything they need to know to provide total medical care to your pets. Veterinarians can also be board certified in specialized areas of veterinary medicine.

You can trust your veterinarian to provide you with the highest quality care for your pet. Veterinarians will prescribe medicines only when your pet needs them and only at the dose required.

Teamwork!

Your veterinarian will work with you and your pet in a team approach to total health care. They will perform a thorough examination and listen to you to accurately evaluate your pet's medical needs and prescribe appropriate preventative or therapeutic care.

Veterinarians care about the health and welfare of your pets. Let us help you take the best care of your pet possible so they can have long, happy and active lives. Visit your local veterinarian today.
